

ILWU Auxiliary Handmade Quilt

With this year's International Credit Union Day theme of "People Helping People," we'd like to recognize and thank those organizations that help us fulfill this mission. In particular, we'd like to take this opportunity to thank the ILWU Auxiliary for their continued support. For nearly 20 years, the ILWU Auxiliary has donated a handmade quilt to the credit union for our annual Credit Union for Kids fundraiser, benefiting Doernbecher Children's Hospital in Portland, Oregon. With their generous donation every year, we've been able to raise thousands of dollars for area children.

This year's quilt has a patriotic theme, and the winner will be drawn on November 10, 2015, in honor and remembrance of our veterans and military. Please buy a ticket and join us to be a part of the "People Helping People" movement.

People Helping People

The credit union movement began 160 years ago with a simple but radical idea: with the help of your neighbors, you can improve your financial well-being. This idea spread across the world and credit unions flourished, especially during times of economic hardship.

During the Great Depression, scores of ordinary Americans – farmers, teachers, small-business owners, etc. – found themselves without access to banking services, so they banded together to become their own not-for-profit financial institution. Credit unions opened in record numbers.

When the Great Recession hit decades later, credit union membership swelled again. Today, there are 100 million credit union members in the United States and more than 200 million credit union members worldwide.

But even after all this time, the bedrock principles of credit unions remain unchanged. Credit unions are still based on:

- People coming together to be their own bank, so no one can deny them a path to prosperity.
- People pooling their savings to provide each other affordable credit.
- People helping people.

To celebrate this powerful movement, join Lower Columbia Longshoremen's Federal Credit Union on October 15, 2015. We will have free refreshments and special credit union giveaways.
